Title : Current status of herbal medicine and pharmacists in France

Summary : This presentation will be the opportunity to discover together the particularities of the French pharmaceutical system. We will detail the missions of the French pharmacist and see how pharmacovigilance has become one of the priorities for the French healthcare system. True co-pilot of the physician, the pharmacist benefits in France from a crucial position to protect the patient health and this especially in the rural areas.

Also we will see that medicinal plants and their different forms (phytotherapy, aromatherapy, gemmotherapy and homeopathy) remain accessible, safe and interesting therapeutic solutions for the patient. We will detail in particular the place held by aromatherapy which is a discipline of interest from a pharmacological point of view. Indeed, sold in pharmacy, essential oils have an important role and are safe health products for the whole family.

Finally, we will see that the Japanese and European pharmacopoeias are not so far apart with many plants in common such as ginger and licorice. We will also discuss the different forms available to the patient and see to what extent they are different from those found in Kampo medicine.
